MESSAGE FROM DIRECTOR (HR)

Ms. PRIYA THAPAR
Director - HR

Wishing the entire JCT family a Very Happy Independence Day !!

The very mention of the word Independence brings back nostalgic memories to all those who love their country. They are moments of sheer magic when a nation held in bondage for centuries breaks free from the shackles of foreign rule and breathes in winds of freedom. The country that suffered slavery is the very country that has been admired by many in the West. We as Indians need to be proud of that legacy.

No less a person than Albert Einstein has said of India: "We owe a lot to the Indians, who taught us how to count, without which no worthwhile scientific discovery could have been made." The famous German scholar Max Muller observed, "If I were asked under what sky the human mind has most fully developed some of its choicest gifts, has most deeply pondered on the greatest problems of life, and has found solutions, I should point to India." And Mark Twain who is known for his satirical comments observes seriously that India is the cradle of the human race, the birthplace of human speech, the mother of history, the grandmother of legend, and the great grandmother of tradition.

Our most valuable and most instructive materials in the history of man are treasured up in India only. Such a great nation that was the fount of wisdom is ours and ours only.

But today, we see that freedom that was won by sacrifice, blood and toil is being taken for granted. Most Indians are not keenly appreciative of the blessings of being born an Indian. We need to cherish our heritage and remember our roots, for in those, lie the strength to encourage us to persevere and overcome all adversity.

We dedicate this edition of JCT Times to our beloved Founder of the Thapar Group of Companies – Lala Karam Chand Thapar, whose strong sense of nationalism and firm belief in the excellence that India could achieve, led him to persevere in the face of skepticism from others at the time, and stood up to the challenge of creating Indian Industrial and Business enterprises that have grown from strength to strength, over three generations and have endured the vagaries of financial and economic downturn, and even today are a symbol of what the determination of one individual can create.

It is this very spirit to win that Lalaji inculcated in his companies that has been exemplified in JCT Limited turning around and posting a net profit of Rs. 8.78 crores in the Financial Year 2014-15, due to the efforts of our CMD Mr. Samir Thapar and the entire Management, Staff and Workers of our company, and we look forward to even better results and growth in business in Financial Year 2015-16.

With warm wishes,

Priya Thapar

A Tribute To Lala Karam Chand Thapar

Karam Chand Thapar, 1917.

The Beginning

Nurtured by Lala Karam Chand Thapar, JCT Limited is today one of the flagship companies of the Thapar Group and a leading manufacturer of textiles and filament yarn. With operations in two distinct businesses – cotton, synthetic & blended textiles and nylon filament yarn – JCT Limited is a market driven company fueled by good work ethic, values and a high standard of performance. It is this culture that has helped establish the company's reputation as one of the finest in the country.

JCT Limited was the first textile manufacturer in the country to introduce eco-friendly fabrics made of organic cotton and its textile division was the first in the industry to be accredited with an ISO 9001 certification in 1996.

Over seven decades, since it commenced production in 1946, the textile unit of JCT Limited has grown into one of the largest textile manufacturers in India.

With integrated textile facility in Phagwara (Punjab), a daily production capacity of 63 million meters per annum, and a product range consisting of some of the finest cotton and blended fabrics, this division has made a mark both the domestic and international markets. This has been driven by the desire to excel in every sphere of its operations - spinning, weaving and processing, as well as stringent quality control at each stage of production.

The strong work ethic is a legacy of Lala Ji and we dedicate this freedom edition of JCT Times to honour the Life And Legacy of Lala Karam Chand Thapar.

About the Visionary

Our founder Karam Chand Thapar (1900-1963) was an ordinary man who went on to achieve extraordinary things. He was a self-made man in the true sense of the word.

After his marriage, Shyamlal, a cousin who ran a coal depot in Ludhiana, introduced Sachhar to Karam Chand and in the course of their conversation, the young boy was offered a partnership, which enabled him to do business in the coal belt of Jharia, near Dhanbad in Bihar.

Soon he moved to Calcutta, and an office was rented at 9, Dalhousie Square East, where the firms of Karam Chand Thapar and Co., Karam Chand Thapar & Bros., and Shyamlal Thapar & Bros. were established. In 1923 he made history by acquiring the rights to exploit Bird and Co.'s Sirka Coal mine in Hazaribagh.

His 1936 acquisition of the Deoria Sugar Mills in the Gorakhpur District brought an associated electric supply company into his fold. After a quick succession of the Sugar Mills, he ventured into the business of Insurance, Dry Ice, Refrigeration, Starch, Chemicals and Paper. His ambition led him to acquire the Mahavir Insurance Co. Ltd., in Calcutta in 1937.

In 1946 Karam Chand started textile businesses by establishing the Jagatjit Cotton Textiles Mills Ltd. at Phagwara in Punjab. This mill produced unfinished cloth for export to the U.K. where it was further processed and mercerized.

A Tribute To Lala Karam Chand Thapar

The Maharaja of Patiala would refer to him with deep affection as: "A Fine Punjabi and a Great Friend." It is amazing just how many people felt a special bond with him. That he grew up to be a rare individual who built a large industrial empire from truly humble beginnings, can largely be attributed to his uncanny ability to win friends and influence people.

But he was driven by much more than mere lucre. He believed from his core that he was one of the architects of a strong India. His contribution has undoubtedly been significant to the development of India.

In ways that many will never fully appreciate, he helped guide the destiny of Indian industry by convincing the likes of Jawaharlal Nehru and Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel that Indian businessmen were not merely equal, but in many respect better than the British.

In his private capacity of entrepreneur and his official capacity as an Industrial representative Karam Chand bristled at the inequity meted out to the Indian in the arena of commerce.

Time and again, he demanded that government do away with the unfair sway Britishers maintained over Indian business. He was an aggressive capitalist, but also a warm, benevolent and courageous person. His values were deeply rooted in the rural countryside he grew up in and the extraordinary times through which the country was passing. He was in every sense a visionary.

His vision was an industrially powerful India. It was this dynamism that made him one of the most outstanding magnates of this generation.

A Tribute To Lala Karam Chand Thapar

It was a mix of luck and acumen that propelled Karam Chand into the vortex of the coal industry. He then had no way of knowing that he would play a role in the very industrialization of India through the establishment of a fuel supply network that enabled some of the India's largest industrial families to meet their energy requirements.

Having gained his experience in the coal business at the hands of Lala Ramlal Sachhar over a span of 12 months Karam Chand decided to strike out on his own in 1919. His Rs 12,000/- investment into Sachhar's coal trading partnership had swelled to Rs.40, 000/- within a year. In the process, Karam Chand had gained invaluable experience in the coal trade and made contacts that were to serve him well throughout his lifetime.

Years later Master Kishen Singh, a follower of Swami Dayanand and a teacher of Karam Chand, was to write about these difficult, but fascinating days:

"(Karam Chand) would leave his house at four in the morning, cover a distance of 40 or 50 miles in the day, visiting mines and calling on his clients and be back late in the night. His body ached and his thighs got bruised with constant cycling, but this never deterred him from keeping steadfastly to his self-imposed task."

A Tribute To Lala Karam Chand Thapar

It had become common knowledge that once Karam Chand had given his word, he would not go back on it. This was probably the substructure of his success to the day he died because in those early days most Indian businessmen and several Europeans as well, transacted large deals on the basis of the spoken word alone. Trust was everything... Not only between him and his customers, but also his employees.

When a Branch Manager once made a bad investment and lost a huge amount of money, Karam Chand was so angry that he decided to sack him. The gentleman concerned was summoned to the head office where, even before he could be dressed down, he admitted his mistake and freely took responsibility for it.

Something in his demeanor touched Karam Chand, who instantly reversed his earlier decision and asked the man to return his Branch to resume work. He was, of course, told to be more careful in future! This was not the act of a sentimentalist, but rather that of a shrewd investor, who had bought the employee's gratitude and loyalty for life.

No matter how busy he was, or how stretched his interests, nothing to do with sales and profitability ever escaped his attention even in the smallest of arenas of business. Very early in his life he had set up a system of monitoring the work of his employees (through other employees!), yet, unless the situation demanded his intervention as in the case of the wayward Branch Manager described above, he never disturbed a man at his job.

Nor did he undermine a manager's authority in front of his subordinates. The unique and innate genius for organization and leadership was a part of his being. A quick and clear understanding of men and matters was yet another secret of Karam Chand's success.

A Tribute To Lala Karam Chand Thapar

In early 1947, Karam Chand entrusted the planning of three other textile mills in Phagwara, Amritsar and Bhutwal to an Englishman, J.A. Meek, of Greaves Cotton and Co. Ltd.

Later he asked his key colleagues to make an organization chart and manual as a guide for the Thapar Group and served notice to all that Karam Chand had begun to consolidate his vast empire and bring professionalism in Thapar businesses.

Lala Karam Chand Thapar started Ballarpur Industries limited (BILT) in 1945 as Ballarpur Paper and Straw Board Mills Limited Incorporated.

Lala Karam Chand Thapar started JCT Cotton Textiles Limited (JCT Limited) operations in 1946.

In 1947, Greaves Cotton & Crompton Parkinson Ltd was bought by Lala Karam Chand Thapar.

On 24th March 1962, Lala Karam Chand had to give a speech at the 35th Annual Meeting of the Indian Chambers of Commerce at New Delhi where Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru and other luminaries were to be present. He had written out a speech, which, exuded confidence, impatience and eagerness to put the Indian industrial juggernaut on track:

"Time itself is productive. In the private sector, inefficiency results in loss; but in the public sector it results in higher taxes. What is basically necessary for the healthy functioning of the economy is wholesome competition. It ensures the production of those things which people desire most, with minimum expenditure of human and material resources."

This passion exemplified by Lalaji, during his lifetime, was left to the next generation to continue.

As part of our religious and cultural beliefs, we as Indians often organize Langars for the poor and needy. However once over, the Langar sites resemble garbage dumps with leftover food, utensils, paper plates and cups thrown all over, showing a complete lack of civic sense.

Gandhi Ji after said that "Cleanliness is next to Godliness" so is that same spirit we at JCT are organizing a langar on 15th August 2015 at Chohal, Hoshiarpur on the occasion of First Navratri.

To deal with garbage and refuse generated during the Langar, we are procuring trash bins, clean up vans, sweepers and volunteers to collect and dispose of the trash.
